

StreamWIDE Expands Presence in CALA – Messaging Solution Deployed for Columbus Communications Inc.

Lyndhurst, USA – August 12, 2010 – Columbus Communications Inc., a Caribbean-based telecommunications provider operating in 22 countries, has selected StreamWIDE (Alternext Paris: ALSTW), a leader in next generation value-added services, to supply the centralized voicemail solution that will serve the residential and business market segments of three of its subsidiaries: Flow Trinidad, Flow Jamaica, and Flow Granada.

The StreamWIDE Messaging solution is replacing Columbus' legacy voicemail platform and providing new value-added features. For instance, the Virtual Network Operator (VNO) feature enables Columbus to deliver the service to its different subsidiaries, while targeting different segments with customized configurations, all from a single platform. Another example is the video messaging capabilities that Columbus will be implementing in the coming months.

"Columbus' scope of operations is large and complex, and network resources need to be managed very efficiently in order to provide a qualitative service with a fair price to the end users," said Luciano Ramos, Director of Telephony Engineering for Columbus. "We believe that the capabilities that StreamWIDE includes in its solution are unique assets that will significantly streamline our business."

Migration from the previous platform was carried out smoothly, with downtime prevented due to thorough coordination between the StreamWIDE, Columbus, and Flow technical teams. The platform has been running without interruption since the swap occurred in the summer of 2010.

"It is a pleasure to work with this exceptionally agile and dynamic operator that is clearly looking for ways to be innovative and to offer its customers the best possible services in the market. We applaud this effort and are committed to continue helping Columbus achieve their ambitious goals," declared Juan C. Sanchez, StreamWIDE Sales Director for the CALA region.
